Circle of Honour is a school-based program designed to help students develop their character, build resilience and become exposed to what respect and true honour looks like. This is an optional extension on the weekly circle time activities that will take place in the classroom that are also aimed at resilience and well-being. This will be an on-going course of weekly sessions that will run throughout the year. These times will incorporate ‘circle time solutions’ activities, discussions, self-help strategies and exploring positive relationships. At different times during the year the sessions may take the form of a half to whole day activity that may be off-site, further information about these will come out closer to their eventuation.

Students with on-going social and emotional needs will be nominated by class teachers and assigned to this group via the Special Needs Action Committee, at this time you will be contacted to determine if this is an avenue you would like to explore with us. In saying this, at any point you feel this is something you would like your child to attend then please contact your class teacher to discuss the possibilities and reasons. Numbers will be limited and students can cease from taking part in these sessions as soon as you decide they are no longer warranted.

Please contact your class teacher if this program is a something that you would like to explore. I recommend that you allow your child a few solid weeks at the start of the year to assess how they are adapting to their new settings, before contacting your class teacher about ‘Circle of Honour’.
